PRESIDENT HARDING DIES SUDDENLY

VICE PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE TAKES OATH

END COMES WITHOUT WARNING FROM APOPLEXLY LATE THURS.

Nation Mourns For 29th President

THE LATE PRESIDENT WARREN G. HARDING

Warren Gamaliel Harding

(By International News Service)

WARREN GAMALIEL HARDING was twenty-ninth President of the United States

From the great war his administration inherited the most stubborn and perplexing problems in the history of the nation America had repudiated the League of Nations, yet Europe and even bitter opponents of the League in the United States were looking to this country to play a leading part in world reconstruction

National morale was at a low ebb, due perhaps to the fact that Europe was torn with strife, convalescing slowly and was constantly on the brink of a new major conflict Business was bad labor troubles menaced, moral standards had broken down under the false stimulus of war time thrills

Harding, assuming the reins of office, pledged himself and his Administration to "the restoration of normal, helpful and natural relations between nations and between individuals after the abnormal experiences of the war."

HISTORY MUST JUDGE

How well he succeeded will be written in the history of generations to come. Only then will his true place among the Presidents of the United States be determined

Perhaps the outstanding concrete action of the Harding administration was the Washington conference for the limitation of armaments, in which six treaties were negotiated between the United States and the principal nations of the world. These treaties were ratified by the Senate, and by the Parliaments of Great Britain, Japan, Italy and France

By the principal treaty Britain France Japan, Italy and the United States agreed to a limitation of naval armaments in accordance with the famous 5-5-3 ratio Other treaties consummated related to the use of submarines and poison gases in war, matters concerning insular possessions in the Pacific and policies affecting China

Time alone will reveal the influence of the Washington Conference on international [illegible]

SOUGHT TAX REDUCTION

Harding sought by this method to guarantee the United States relief from taxes needed to construct a huge navy and [illegible] to business a long period of security from war looking years ahead to peaceful expansion prosperity and steady employment of labor

Propped Up in Bed in San Francisco Hotel While Mrs. Harding Read to Him from Magazine the President Expires Instantly Without a Struggle—Funeral Train Leaves San Francisco Tonight for Washington

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 3—While a great nation bowed reverently in its grief today, the body of Warren G. Harding, 29th president of the United States, lay in stately simplicity on the topmost floor of a great hotel, 3,000 miles away from the capital.

The president died, quietly, easily and with a suddenness that was shocking at 7:30 o'clock Pacific Coast time last night, only a few hours after the physicians who had been hovering over him for days had issued the most favorable news yet of his brief illness.

At about the same hour tonight, 7:30 p. m. there will start from this far western city a funeral procession across the continent such as the nation has never before witnessed; a funeral train bearing the body of a president of the United States across the 3,000 miles of deserts, plains and mountains.

The immediate cause of the president's shocking death was officially announced today to be cerebral apoplexy—a rupture of a blood vessel in the axis of the brain near the respiratory center.

He was half reclining in his bed at the time. A few feet from him was Mrs. Harding, reading to him a magazine article. In the room were two nurses, no one else.

Suddenly and totally without warning there was a slump in the half reclining figure on the bed. A scarcely audible noise, something of a moan, yet not a moan, came from the president.

There was a startled exclamation from Mrs. Harding, a sudden rush of the nurses to the bedside, then one of them dashed the few feet into the hallway.

"Dr. Boone! Doctor Boone!" she screamed, calling the name of the naval doctor who has been constantly on night duty since the president first became ill.

Behind her was Mrs. Harding.

"Get all the doctors quickly, for God's sake!" she said in a voice that was not a scream but which penetrated every corner of the quiet eighth floor of the Palace Hotel.

Across the corridor was Dr. Charles E. Sawyer, who has been the president's family physician for many years and who was acting as chief of the president's medical staff. He heard the commotion and leaped across the few feet into the president's bed chamber.

"Warren! Warren!" said Mrs. Harding. It was the name she most frequently used in addressing the president.

Dr. Sawyer grabbed the limp hand bending over the bed.

The president of the United States was dead.

Without a groan, without a cry, without a struggle, he had passed away in that instant.

No word had passed his lips to give the people in the room a warning.

Something had snapped in his brain The doctors say it was probably the instantaneous rupture of a blood vessel, flooding the brain with a sudden gush of engulfing blood Death, they believe, was instantaneous.

This is the story of the president's death, as gathered from the few who are in a position to know

The first bulletin of his death said that "Mrs Harding and the two nurses Miss Powderly and Miss Sue Bauesser, were in the room at the time"

Later a correction was issued on this bulletin, stating that Gen Sawyer also was present.

No sudden climax ever conceived by the brain of a dramatist could have equalled that of the passing of the president Only a few hours before the doctors had reported him gaining rapidly and steadily on the combination of illness that only five days ago forced him to abandon the most special trip ever undertaken by a president of the United States and which we more [illegible] an half concluded at the time of his breakdown

There were few about on the eighth floor of the hotel at the time

The corridors which have been jammed with the coming and going of constant crowds for days were almost deserted It was the dinner hour The member of the cabinet and personal friends of the president who have been his

Father of Vice President Coolidge Administers President's Oath Early Fri. in Vermont Hills Home

News of Chief Executive's Death Is Carried to Vice-President and Family On Vacation at Father's Home in Foothills of Green Mountains of Vermont—Oath Is Read by Father After News Is Confirmed Early Friday

BULLETIN
BY THOMAS WRIGLEY

PLYMOUTH, Vermont, Aug. 3—At 2:47 o'clock this morning (Eastern standard time) Calvin Coolidge became president of the United States.

In a dimly lamp lighted room in the old Coolidge homestead in the midst of the Vermont hills and in the presence of only a few witnesses, the oath was administered by John C. Coolidge, the new president's father. The elder Coolidge is a notary public which qualified him to officiate at the momentous event.

The proper form of oath was not at hand and an urgent telegram was sent to Washington, D. C., to obtain it.

With no other visible form of emotion save the paleness of countenance Mr. Coolidge stood beside a little table with his right hand upraised as his aged father read the oath:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States."

In deep silence which followed Mr. Coolidge said:

"I will, so help me God."

Mr Coolidge immediately began preparations to leave for Washington.

Word had been received of President Harding's death at midnight [illegible] also. Others present were Congressman Porter H Dale L. L. ITALY TO PAY DEBT TO U.S.A.

Promise Stands, Says Mussolini No Matter What France Does

WILL TAKE TIME

Reparations Do Not Enter Into Italy's Obligation

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

ROME, Aug 2 — Italy, unlike France has promised to pay her war debt to America irrespective of whether any reparations are forthcoming from the enemy powers Italy is weaker from an economic viewpoint than France, but she makes no conditions about her promise to pay

"The Italian government," said Premier Mussolini to the writer, has declared it will meet the obligations completely because we have set our signature down and are not advocates of the scrap of paper theory. Naturally as the United States has given relatively good times to Great Britain, Italy expects to be given terms proportionate to her economic strength."

In other words, the Italians wish to pay but they want the terms made so the debt can be distributed over a period of years consistent with their capacity to pay. They also want interest charges that are not burdensome simply because the period of payment may be lengthy.

IT'S A POOR RULE THAT DON'T WORK A COUPLE OF WAYS --By BUD FISHER (Copyright, 1923.)

RAIN HALTS GAME IN 8TH INNING WITH REGULARS AND TIRES TIED, ONE SCORE EACH

Jupe Pluvius came as a pinch hitter in the first of the eighth inning and won the game for the weather man over the Akron General Tires and the Coshocton Regulars.

When the rain came the score was tied, 1 to 1. Had Jupe held off until later the throng of fans might have seen a game for several extra innings.

It was a pitchers battle until rain brot an end to the contest, with Orve Rea having a slight edge over Jim Vaughn, who occupied the mound for the rubber workers.

In the first inning Rea yielded a safety from the bat of Graham, center fielder and the first man up in the first inning. His hit was a Texas leaguer over Witt's head. Graham advanced to third when Rea made a wild throw to first base in an attempt to put Lamb out after cleanly fielding his roller. As luck would have it Corcoran flied into a double play. He popped to Witt who threw to Evans at third, catching Graham off by five feet. Gill rolled out, Witt to Edwards and the thrilling inning was over.

The Regulars made their lone tally in their half of the first. Atchinson was safe at first when the first baseman dropped the shortstop's assist. Evans sacrificed Atchinson to second, Vaughn to Humbrecht. Atchinson scored when Jim Edwards stepped into one of Vaughn's offerings for a long single. Storch hit a high fly to the shortstop and Unger rolled out, Lamb to Humbrecht.

The Tires tied the score in the first of the sixth. Graham walked and stole second. He went to third when Edwards booted Lamb's grounder. Graham scored while Lamb was thrown out at second, Hildebrant to Laird. Hildebrant evidently made the throw to second purposely to induce Graham to come home and expected Laird to relay the ball right back in time to catch Graham. Hildebrant's throw to second was a little low and Laird made no effort to throw graham out at the plate.

The Regulars threatened to untie the score in their half of the sixth. Atchinson fanned. Evans hit a dandy on the nose to right center. Evans stole second. He died on second base after Edwards and Storch hit long flies to the left fielder.

It began to sprinkle in the first of the seventh.

An opportunity to score again presente itself in the last of the seventh. Unger got a hit when Vaughn failed in his attempt to field his hot grounder with one hand. Witt rolled to the second baseman who threw Unger out at second. Laird popped to Lamb. Catcher Gill gave Vaughn orders to purposely pass Hildebrant to get a chance at Rea. Rea was also walked but apparently not intentionally. With the bases full Vaughn pitched masterful baseball Atchinson took three heathy cuts and fanned, ending the inning.

While Humbrecht was batting the rain began. The game was called by Umpire Lowery by agreement of both managers.

The hits at the time the game was called stood, two for the Tires and three for the Regulars. Graham was the only batter on the rubber team who got a legitimate hit. Humbrecht was given an infield hit when first base was not covered to throw him out after Edwards had fielded his roller. Edwards and Evans were the only Regulars who got legitimate safeties. Unger scratched a bingle off Vaughn's mitted band in the last of the seventh.

With the exception of two errors Coshocton played a good fielding game. The Tires had one lone error and that came in the first inning when Atchinson was safe at first base. No extra base hits were made in the game.

Following is the game by innings and the summary:

				R	H	E
Akron	000	001	0	1	2	1
Coshocton	100	000	0	1	3	2

Hits by Innings—

Akron	110	000	0—2
Coshocton	100	001	1—3

Double play, Witt to Evans. Batteries: Akron—Vaugh and Gill. Coshocton—Rea and Hildebrant. Umpire, Lowery, of Granville. Lowery officiated satisfactorily to both teams

On Sunday afternoon the Coshocton Regulars journey to Newark instead of playing at Lake Park. Last night the local management got a wire from the Newark manager saying that it was impossible for the Newark team to come here and that the Regulars would have to play at Newark Sunday according to the regular schedule.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting and operations fail?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal?

That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is a harmless remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, now sold by Wimmer-Arnold Co. and druggists generally, that is guaranteed?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause, by freeing blood circulation in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers. There is no reason why it should not do the same for you.

YANKS DUE FOR SLUMP, DECLARES SPORTS WRITER

Would Cinch Flag in 8 Games Were Past Pace Continued

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Perhaps, as the boys insist, only a modern miracle can prevent the New York Yankees from cake walking to the pennant by eight games or more. With a margin of 12½ games to work on, the patient might be said to be resting easily this morning, after having spent a comfortable night but—

The Yanks are due for a slump in the immediate future as sure as the Almighty made them small, round and sometimes sour. When that moment arrives the rally will become a relapse without further notice and the situation in the American League will be less of a procession and more of a race.

In fact and fable, the hare always rests after its lead becomes too long to sustain its vagrant attention. Ball clubs have something in common with the hare. There is always a let down with the best and the worst of them and the Yanks are due.

The law of averages is all against the Huggins entry continuing at its present pace for the remainder of the season. No club however great, can hope to win seven out of every ten games it plays in a major legaue, unless the competition is very much declasse. We doubt that this applies to the American League, appearances to the contrary.

The Cleveland Indians, for example, are quite a ball club—a good infield, one of the best outfields in baseball and fair pitching. It is a young outfit for the most part, however, and figures to do better in the closing stages of the campain because it is just finding itself.

The Tigers also should improve now that they can place Jones at third and Haney at second and be assured of an infield that does not resemble a first class sieve. The Tigers will always be as uncertain as a flapper's affections until they get better pitching but the speed and offensive strength of the club is too great to allow it to finish the season below the .500 mark.

The present position of the White Sox is also sub-normal. Those who saw the club in action here are free to admit that they fail to understand its inability to win consistently The Sox are a natural first division club.

The Browns, in third place, are always dangerous. So are the Athletics, the latter being the only entry mentioned that will not face the Yanks on their next western trip. The journey in question will be a rough one, unless we miss our guess.

DOPE FAVORS GREYS TO WIN 1923 FLAG IN THE E. O. LEAGUE

The Zanesville Greys are picked to win the Eastern Ohio League pennant, according to many of the dopesters around the circuit

Coshocton is picked to land a close second, with Mansfield within a few points behind Coshocton Newark Mendels and Mt Vernon will probably finish fourth and fifth respectively, the dopesters aver. Altho it will be a close fight, the Mendels are picked to finally nose out Mt. Vernon, they add.

Manager Al. Schweitzer said at the beginning of this season that his team would be in the first division at the finish.

It will be quite a fight between Canton and Cambridge for sixth position. Canton got a good start in the league race, but lately has been meeting defeat at the hands of teams further in the cellar. The Cambridge Afefas now have a good club and will give the best of the teams a run. They demonstrated their hitting and fielding ability in the last game with Coshocton. It took ten innings for Coshocton to come out from behind.

It's a settled fact that the Columbus Rutledges willfinish in the cellar. The Rutledges got off to a bad start, the same as the Coshocton Regulars. Coshocton came out of their slump when the new management got hold of the club.

The Regulars have five postponed games to play. Winning three out of five would keep the Regulars aroun dthe top of the league.

It will not be long before the four all-steel trains of the big show steams into the city, and all the familiar activities of the circus will be with us—and many of them that are not familiar, but none-the-less attractive. For the Golden Bros.' Big Four Ring Trained Wild Animal Circus carries in every department things that are new to the circus lot. From motor to electric contrivances to its four rings. Four steel-lattice arena performances, to its lengthy, impressive and open animal den street parade.

The canvas city of the circus covers eleven acres of ground. There are over 1,100 people. Five hundred and fifty horses and over 500 animals with the show. There are three herds of elephants, all of them performers of merit, while the famous Golden Bros.' Trained Wild Animals furnish thrills in proper circus abundance. The performance this year has its appeal for the children as well as for their elders, in the newly added big spectacle "Cinderella in Jungleland." What man, woman or child of today has not read the story of "Cinderella?"

DIVIDEND CHECKS OF PHOENIX CO. BURNED, CLAIM

COLUMBUS, Aug. 3. — That more than 4,000 dividend checks, dated July 15, last, approximately $100,000, to preferred stockholders of the Phoenix Portland Cement Company of Ohio were alleged to have been burned just before the R. L. Dollings Co., of Ohio, was placed in the hands of receivers, is the testimony submitted here by Paul A. DeLong, Columbus banker and one of the receivers of the Dollings Co. and four of its subsidiaries.

Mr. DeLong also testified that S. W. Walter, cashier and assistant treasurer of the Dollings Co., told him of the check burning incident. DeLong was the first witness called to the stand when common pleas Judge Eastman resumed his hearing shortly before noon today relative to the application for appointment of a receiver for the cement company.

U. S. WOMEN HAVE NEW SUPER-CLUB

Applications Filed in Common Pleas Court at Columbus Wed.

LONDON, Aug. 2. — American women domiciled in London, and those visiting London for any period, now have an up-to-date and palatial club for themselves.

The club, which is in the fashionable Grosvenor Square quarter, was formerly the residence of Sir Edgar Speyer, and was purchased from him for $100,000. It was officially opened by Mrs. Post Wheeler.

Mrs. Curtis Brown was elected president at the club's first meeting. It was revealed that the membership, which is restricted to American women, is already between five and six thousand, while the associate membership, which admits English wives of American citizens, is also very large.

Lady Astor, who spoke at the meeting, ventured to express the hope that the club would become a "center of political agitation," where every American woman could go and say what she thought of England. The chief object of their gatherings, however, she hazarded, would be to provide a social center in London for American women and to keep them in touch with the homeland.

Thousands of dollars have been spent on making the premises probably the most luxurious and decorative women's club in the world. Rooms which include a bathroom tiled in blue marble, in which is sunk a deep silver oval bath, and huge bedrooms which look as if they had been transplanted from Venice, are among the wonders of this super-club. Every bedroom contains valuable old furniture in keeping with the "period" decorations, while the oak-panelled lounge hall contains some of the most wonderful carvings in London. A Regent period ballroom, complete with minstrels gallery, a chestnut panelled dining room, Gothic staircase and charming Old World Italian flower garden are among other features.

All the standard American delicacies, even down to clam chowder, are obtainable in the dining room.

Bryan Tosses Bomb Into Underwood Camp; Says He Represents Wall St.

(By H. K. REYNOLDS)
(Copyright 1923 by I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. — William Jennings Bryan does not believe that Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, will be selected as the Democratic presidential candidate in 1924.

He made this plain in an exclusive statement telegraphed to International News Service from his home in Miami, Fla., and he served notice at the same time that he would oppose Underwood in the primaries and in the national convention next spring because he represents "Wall Street and the wets."

Tho he has been three times defeated for the presidency while carrying the Democratic standard, Colonel Bryan still has an influential following within the party and his views will have an important bearing on the formation of the Democratic patform next year and the naming of the party's presidential candidate. Despite his inability to get himself in the white house, his political opinions—based on his long experience in national politics and his recent travels from one end of the country to the other—will be listened to and respected, while the "dry" Democrats and many of the "progressives" in the party will rally around him as their natural leader and spokesman.

Bryan chose to throw his bombshell into the Underwood camp just as the friends of the Alabama senator were assuring themselves that he had placed himself in a position to win the votes of the drys by announcing that he stood for enforcement of the Volstead act even if he had been against prohibition when liquor was before congress. They had been reassured, too, because Senator Underwood, as soon as he had announced his candidacy on Tuesday, received the public endorsement of the Anti-Saloon League of Alabama, regardless of his wet record.

But Colonel Bryan has now brot the wet and dry issue within the Democratic party squarely in the open. He has served notice that there will be a bitter fight to keep the party dry and he thinks that Senator Underwood is "wetter" than Governor Alfred Smith, of New York.

Bryan sees no objection to a southern Democrat as the party's presidential candidate but he does not think that Senator Underwood is the best available timber, "nominating" instead former Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels of North Carolina, former Governor Braxton Bragg Comer of Alabama or Governor Pat Neff of Texas.

"Senator Underwood's availability," Bryan declared today, "will depend entirely upon the platform adopted next year.

"If Wall Street and the wets control the convention and write the platform they will doubtless regard Senator Underwood as the logical candidate. He is wetter than Governor Smith and has for a long time been the spokesman of that element. He also represents the Wall Street point of view on public questions.

"But Wall Street and the wets are not likely to control the next convention.

"There is no objection to a southern candidate and there are many prominent southern Democrats who are in sympathy with the sentiment of the Democratic party.

"Why not select one of these, for instance, Daniels of North Carolina, Comer of Alabama or Neff of Texas? Every southern state can furnish an available progressive Democrat who is able to poll several million votes more than Senator Underwood. He was not available in 1912 and is much less available now."

Colonel Bryan is the first outstanding Democratic leader to come out in opposition to Senator Underwood's candidacy. It was pointed out here that in suggesting possible southern Democrats to run for the nomination in 1924 he did not refer to William Gibbs McAdoo, probably because he is now more closely identified with the far west, altho a native of Georgia and a former resident of Tennessee.

Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, who is in Washington in connection with the coal situation, declined to discuss the Underwood candidacy but asserted that domestic issues rather than international problems would be the determining factors in the next presidential campaign.

GRANDMA NEVER LET HER HAIR GET GRAY

She Kept Her Locks Dark and Glossy, with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost, you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becames beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, and look years younger.

TODAY'S BRIGHT SPOT.

A Kansas cyclone met a Dakota tornado, and when police, in response to frantic calls from neighbors, reached the home of Marie Evans, 30, where the disturbance seemed to be localized, they found the furniture wrecked and the home in wild disorder.

Marie, whose home is in Lima, was placed in the woman's prison. A few minutes later, there was a sound of breaking glass. The cops found Marie standing over the remains of a shattered wall mirror. On their next visit, they found the bedding torn to pieces and all the water glasses in the place broken.

They arraigned Miss Evans. "Me drunk?" the astonished lady exclaimed. "Why, judge, that's not true. I plead not guilty."

The court sighed and set the date of trial.

CINCINNATI — Municipal Judge Yeatman became indignant when Nicholas Kramer, charged with reckless driving, admitted to being partly deaf.

"We have people driving cars who are totally deaf, some nearly blind, and others who are nervous wrecks. An insane man can drive an auto and we have no law to prohibit him doing so," the judge said.

BELLAIRE — Police are looking for Bellaire's meanest man.

The fellow won for himself that honor by stealing 18 cents from a 7-year-old newsboy. The lad, with tears streaming down his face, appeared at the police station. Amid his sobs, he told his story. When the boy left the police station he had considerably more than 18 cents in his pocket. Chief Corbett gave him half a dollar to replace the stolen money.

YOUNGSTOWN — Conditions are so good in Youngstown this summer that the Y. W. C. A. camp has been closed, and the Fresh Air Camp will be kept filled only by needy children from East Youngstown and by keeping anaemic children longer than two weeks, as in former years.

ELYRIA — John Hoover, John Hargett and Francis Hunt, trusties at the state asylum reformatory farm, at North Eaton, near here, have escaped. The three men were working in a field with horses. They tied their horses to a fence. They were last seen at Columbia, headed towards Cleveland.

POMEROY — When Mrs. Ro[illegible]anna Pichard, 77, came to the Meigs county jail to see her [illegible] son, held on a charge of shooting his brother, she made her first trip in an automobile. [illegible] also said it was her first trip out of her little home town of [illegible] in more than 25 years.

LIMA — Harry N. [illegible], former city clerk and purchasing agent, has [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] report of a state examiner [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] administration [illegible] good [illegible] report [illegible] [illegible].

MEDINA — [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Firestone for $1555, less than the amount of the total judgment. Frank Heath was Firestone's attorney during the entire 37 years of litigation.

BARNESVILLE — Gasoline is selling here at 15 cents a gallon and may drop to 16 as the result of a price war between the Purol and Sinclair companies. Auto owners are hopeful it will duplicate the California stunt where a similar war brought the price down to 10 cents. Price of gas generally over the state is 22 cents a gallon.

DEFIANCE — Supervised swimming is being considered as one of the community service activities for Defiance by the committee forming the organization for the first year's work. Horse-shoe pitching has proven a popular community sport, city leagues having been formed.

MARTINS FERRY — Counterfeit $20 bills are again being circulated here. Four were turned into one bank in a single day. The are photographic reprints of bills of the National City Bank of Grand Rapids, Mich. Many were distributed in this city and vicinity last [illegible]. Federal agents were unable to locate their source.

BUCYRUS — Desertion [illegible] the cause for action [illegible] [illegible] petition filed in Crawford county court [illegible] Ramsey, married June 12, this year, claims she has been deserted already. After 27 years of married life, Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Crestline, mother of four children, seeks a divorce on the same grounds. She alleges her husband called her vile names and at one time threatened to kill her.

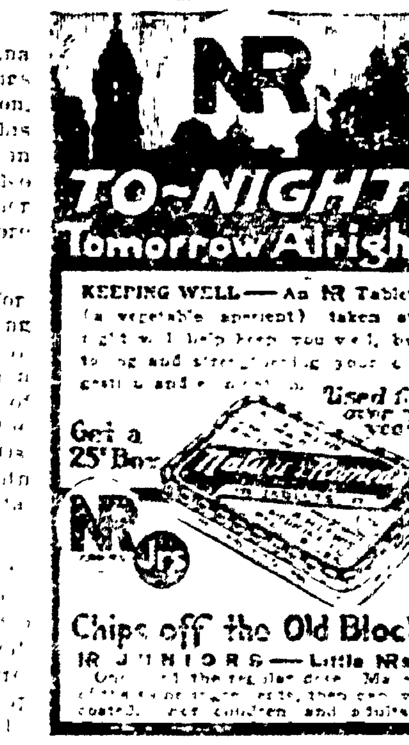

BUCYRUS — The indebtedness of Crawford county, outside the cities of Bucyrus and Galion, is $3,359,392, which is $218,913 less than it was a year ago. The country redeemed $641,109 in bonds and issued $422,195 in new bonds during the year.

The Way Katie and Madge Found Jim.

KATHERINE looked at me with a curious startled tenseness when I announced my intention of going with Katie in search of Jim. I knew that expostulation was trembling upon her lips, but before Katie she said nothing save an eager assent to my query.

"Of course I'll see to the dinner," she said. "But come in here a second before you go."

I followed her out of the kitchen, through the dressing-room, and into the library, where she closed the door behind us.

"Look here!" she said, taking me by the shoulders. "There's danger in going after Jim, isn't there?"

"That depends," I returned truthfully. "It depends upon what Jim has succeeded in doing. But I don't believe——"

"But I do believe," Katherine returned firmly. "And I want you to let me go out there with Katie. It—it—doesn't matter much to anybody what becomes of me, but you have your little boy. You ought not to risk danger."

Her words startled me with their implication of unhappiness. I knew that she had no near relatives—but—Jack, her husband—did she mean that it would not matter much to him if anything happened to her? Had anything of which I did not know transpired in my absence to make her feel so morbid?

I had not time to speculate upon the meaning of her words now, however. Reaching up, I took her hands from my shoulders, and held them firmly while I returned her steady gaze.

Katie Prepares Herself.

"I cannot shelter myself with that plea," I said. "It was I who told Jim of that escaped criminal out there, so I, alone, am responsible for his going after him, and I must go to find Jim. Please don't make it hard for me, Katherine."

Her lips curved into a smile at once tender and whimsical.

"I won't, old Don Quixote," she said. "Run along before Mother Graham finds out you're going, or you'll be swallowed whole."

"She'd probably insist upon going, too," I replied as I heeded Katherine's injunction and hurried back to the kitchen, finding Katie, cloaked and hooded, waiting impatiently at the door. She held her arm closely, stiffly against her side, and glancing keenly at it, I saw that she was concealing a long knife against her dress, one of her kitchen implements which I knew was sharpened to a razor edge.

"Put that away, Katie," I said, restraining a smile with difficulty. "We're going out to hunt Jim, not to kill people."

"How you know we no need sooch tings?" Katie demanded truculently, but she laid the knife down obediently, nevertheless. "Vot you goin' do eef dot mans oop dere, start keel us?"

"A Good Idea."

"There's no chance of that," I said with an assured air which I hoped would quiet her fears, but I did not tell her that concealed in my dress was the tiny pistol which Lillian gave me long ago.

Katie accepted the inevitable with a characteristic shrug of the shoulders.

"Maybe so, maybe not," she said sullenly, and then glanced uneasily through the window.

"Sun most down," she observed, "und we no can tell how long eet take to find dot Jeem. You take dot flashlight? No?"

"That's a very good idea, Katie," I assented. "Have you one here?"

"Two," she responded laconically. "Dot Jeem, he shoost have dem feexed, two, tree, days ago."

"We'll take them both," I decided, glad to be relieved of the necessity of going after my own in my room with the probability of meeting my mother-in-law on the way.

"I get vun meenit," Katie said eagerly, and in less than the time she had named we were outdoors, walking toward the woodland whither Jim had followed the escaped bootlegger.

But for minutes that seemed hours, an hour that stretched interminably into a century, we found no trace of the intrepid man who had gone out into danger with such brave simplicity.

It was long past twilight, almost pitch dark in fact, when hopelessly plodding back to the house by a different route than that which we had taken out, we heard a muffled attempt at a shout, and using our flashlight, saw Jim, bound and gagged, leaning against a big tree.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am considered good-looking, but my mother brought me up on the old-fashioned principle that you mustn't let a boy kiss you until you are engaged.

I know this is right, but I had been good friends with a young man in this place until one night when we got home from a party he seized me and kissed me. I slapped him as it made me very angry at first.

Since then he has refused to speak to me and does not even notice me. He was a nice, respectable young man and none of the young men have anything to do with me. I am very much worried, for I don't want any enemies and I am very anxious to be friends again. Is there anything I can do without seeming bold? PATSY.

PATSY: You were rude when you slapped the young man's face, my dear. You could have told him you didn't want him to kiss you without that.

The correct thing for you to do is to invite him to call on you and apologize, but let him understand clearly that he must not attempt it again if he wishes to remain your friend.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl seventeen years of age and I am in love with a young man one year my senior. I went to various places with him and he was always very nice to me, but about two months ago I made a blunder. I explained it to him and he forgave me, but since then he does not act the same.

I wish very much to regain his friendship and be true friends again. He treats me very coolly and I try to act my best but somehow there is some misunderstanding between us.

Is jealousy a sign of love?

Please advise me what to do.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

By MARK STUYVESANT

A Glimpse of the Romantic Life of Vittoria Colonna.

IN the year 1494, on the beautiful island of Ischia in the Bay of Naples, a little girl played in the sunshine and ran along the seashore gathering pebbles.

She was the daughter of Fabrizio Colonna, the Grand Constable of Naples. Her mother was a daughter of the "Good Duke" Frederick of Urbino, so this child was "born to the purple."

So distinguished was her family that Ferdinand of Aragon, King of Naples, commanded her marriage with Franchesco Pescara, of a noble family of the island of Ischia.

The betrothal took place when Vittoria—for that was her name—was four years old.

There is nothing more beautiful in the history of the reigning families of Europe than the romance of these two children, who spent their early years on the beautiful island of the Bay of Naples, with the sweet thought in their young hearts that one day they would be married.

Although many suitors sought her hand, including the Duke of Savoy and the Duke of Braganza, Vittoria had no desire save to marry her playmate, Franchesco, which she did when she had just passed her seventeenth year.

For five years they were very happy on this sheltered island, protected from the strife which was raging between Naples and Rome, and between France and Spain.

Then Franchesco heard the call to arms, and offered his sword to the Holy League. He enlisted at Ravenna and immediately set out for France.

Franchesco Pescara soon became one of the most brilliant of the captains of Charles the Fifth, under whom he served. At the price of treason the crown of Naples was offered to him, but it was Vittoria who influenced him to decline it.

In 1525 Franchesco was mortally wounded at Milan. Vittoria was crushed, and hurried to see him before he died. But it was too late. He breathed his last before his adoring wife could reach him.

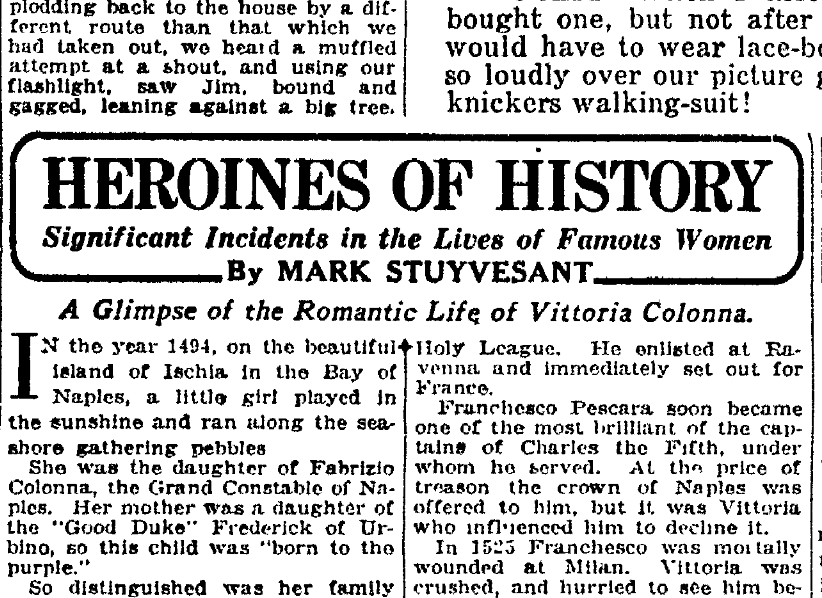

Vittoria returned to her little island and lived in seclusion for ten years, declining the many offers of marriage which were pressed upon her.

Here she began to write, and from her pen came the "Rime Spiritual," which is by far her most distinguished work.

In 1538 Vittoria went to Rome.

She was the most beautiful woman of that city, and at the same time the leader of society and letters. But her crowning success was the wonderful friendship it was her privilege to form. For with the great Michel Angelo Vittoria enjoyed one of the truly beautiful friendships of the Renaissance.

Michel Angelo was sixty five. Vittoria was a beautiful woman. Between them passed many exquisite letters in the form of sonnets. It is said that Vittoria was the real inspiration of much of the great artist's work.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Solving Some of the Problems of Teaching Good Manners.

WHERE, if not at home, shall our children learn good manners? They are made to behave according to certain standards at school, but the manners of good breeding are only learned at home. A certain amount of good manners is required before a pupil is accepted in a so-called "finishing" school, and if manners are not taught at home, they are picked up here and there as the child realizes their need. But they do not know why they do certain things or the laws that govern the courtesy expected from one who is well-bred. This is all up to the home teacher, and she should do her part if she wants her pupils to be a credit to her and take their places in the sun.

First comes the politeness and consideration one toward another expressed in everyday home life—not company manners, but just the best home manners—gentle of voice, kind in criticism, polite to one another and to servants, being slow to ask favors, but ready to grant them to those who ask things in reason. Tact is an attribute to be fostered—the poise that comes from knowing what to do and when to do it comes as the result of careful training.

Table manners need constant attention until the child is so sure of itself that mistakes seldom creep in. This means that the home table must be kept right up-to-date, so that manners learned there will bear fruit elsewhere, as well. Carelessness should not pass uncorrected, but at a quiet, convenient season tell the child—not before others—of its shortcomings. It is apt to make a child stubborn and resentful to be corrected in public, and so the lesson is often lost.

A good dancing school is often an excellent corrective where home influence fails in establishing the little courtesies between the children of the dance age. Envy and jealousy often creep in regarding dress at such schools, and the wise mother has a plain talk with her children and explains that it is her wish to have them dress very simply—in fine materials, but nothing elaborate—until they are of a suitable age. It matters not whether rich or in moderate circumstances, simplicity is always in the best taste. They are there to learn deportment and dancing, and not to be fashion models. Children always are happier after plain talks with mother and understand then that she is not being stingy, but has a definite reason for not fussing them all up.

Another too often neglected field is that of letter writing—formal as well as social. There are certain letters we are called upon to write and it is a good idea to learn the polite forms for them. It is only after maturity that we can afford to be individual in these things. The importance of the "bread and butter" letter is so often overlooked and it is such a little thing to do to openly acknowledge one's gratitude to a hostess who has taken so [illegible] in order that we might have a good time in her home.

Letters of sympathy to bereaved friends are often neglected or side-tracked because people "don't know what to say." The art of writing formal letters of this sort should be taught. It is a part of the social structure of good manners. Then the letters of acceptance for invitations, both formal and informal should be considered. The period of time in which they should be answered and the forms of answering change very little with the passage of time, for the best way has been chosen and is generally followed. It is knowing about these things and bowing to them that stamps us as being well-bred.

It is an art to write a letter asking a favor—for a donation to something with which you may be connected, or to ask for a job. This letter of approach should be courteous, direct and to the point, clear and well-worded. It is the letter oftentimes that wins the position rather than personality.

The social letter is a question that is open to a great deal of criticism. There must be a reason for the correspondence and an interest that makes it worth while, if it is to be a success. Subject matter should be adapted to the ages of writer and recipient. Excuses, apologies, compliments and unpleasant subjects are to be avoided. Bright, newsy—but not gossipy letters—are always a pleasure to receive, and it takes training and thoughtful interest to write them.

YOUR HEALTH

How to Aid a Person Unconscious from a Fall

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

DR. COPELAND

A FEW days ago I was driving along in the country when I saw a man lying by the side of the road. His face was grimy with the dirt of the pavement and, until I felt for his pulse, I feared he was dead.

In this day when every street and highway is crowded with automobiles, head injuries due to accident are all too common. Struck a body blow by a powerful automobile, the injured man is thrown to the ground, his head striking the pavement with terrific force. This is what had happened in the case I have mentioned.

What are the causes of loss of consciousness from injury? Among these are fracture of the skull, concussion of the brain, compression of the brain and bleeding into the brain substance.

Any one of these conditions, even the most serious, may exist without any mark upon the body or head. The brain may be seriously damaged without fracture. It is unusual for fracture of the skull to occur without more or less injury to the brain.

The simplest of the brain injuries is concussion. And yet concussion ranges in severity from a brief loss of voluntary movement lasting but a few minutes, to profound unconsciousness, continuing for hours and ending in death.

When we say that someone was stunned by a fall and was able to go about his affairs in half an hour or so, we describe a very mild concussion of the brain.

In concussion the brain has been shaken and disturbed. There is no damage that the eye can see, even in the fatal cases which have been examined after death. The breathing and heart action are weak, irregular and rapid. The skin is cold and feels clammy to the touch. When consciousness returns there may be vomiting and some fever.

If you are called upon to do something for a person who is stunned or unconscious from any sort of brain injury, you should first find out if there are any marks on the body or head. Make sure that the injured person hasn't fainted from loss of blood.

Then keep the patient perfectly still. Put him to bed in a cool, quiet room, or let him lie on the grass in a quiet place. Don't permit talking or confusion about him.

Elevate his head and shoulders and, unless his temperature is below normal, an ice-cap or cold compresses to the head will be useful.

Do not attempt to pour water or to force food down the throat of an unconscious person. You may do serious harm.

Leave the matter of feeding and further treatment to the doctor, who should be sent for as soon as an accident of this sort is discovered.

Answers to Health Questions.

C. S. P. Q.—What causes a person to have difficulty in breathing?

A.—This may be due to indigestion, heart condition or overweight. The cause should be located and removed.

• • •

F. E. M C Q.—Will you please tell me what causes cracking in the knees?

2.—How are peroxide and lemon juice mixed for use as a bleach?

3.—Kindly advise me about——?

A.—This condition is due to the drying up of the synovial fluid. Massage with cod liver oil is very helpful for this.

2.—Mix equal parts of peroxide and lemon juice, apply to the skin, and allow to dry. This makes a very good skin bleach.

3.—Kindly send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for full particulars and restate your question.

T. F. Q.—What can I do for poison ivy?

A.—The best local remedy for this is grindelia robusta, the fluid extract, 1 part to 6 parts of water. Apply with gauze or a cloth. Creolin is sometimes added to advantage. Buttermilk and crude petroleum are remedies sometimes recommended. A solution of hyposulphite of soda, 1 tablespoonful to 1 ounce of water, will relieve the itching.

• • •

W. B. Q.—I am a young man 23 years old, and am 5 ft. 5 in. tall. What should my correct weight be?

A.—For your age and height you should weigh about 134 pounds.

R. E. R. Q.—What can I do for hot, tired and itching feet?

A.—Constipation is an important factor in this condition, and should be corrected. Drink plenty of water between meals. Bathe the feet frequently, dry thoroughly and apply, hyposulphite of soda, 3 drachms; glycerine 2 drachms; water 4 ounces. Change the hose daily. The shoes, which should be well fitted, should be changed several times a day.

G. G. Q.—Will you please tell me what causes a lame back, and what to do for it?

A.—This may be due to lumbago or a kidney condition. Have your back strapped with adhesive tape, and apply heat to the affected part. Have your urine examined and see if it shows the cause of the trouble.

MRS. B. B. Q.—Will you please tell me what causes a pain on the left side of the shoulder?

A.—This may be due to pleurisy, especially if there is pain on deep breathing. In this case you should have treatment by a physician.

• • •

S. H. Q.—My wife is apparently in perfect health, but she never perspires. Is this harmful, and is there a remedy for it?

A.—No, this is not unusual. Your wife should take plenty of water between meals, however.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Chats About an Attractive Late-Summer Bathing Suit.

MISS MILES came hurrying into Madame's early this morning. It was only ten and her clients seldom begin coming till after eleven.

I had just been in long enough to remove my street clothes and put on a little thin silk frock I usually wear when I'm not modeling things for clients. I was changing into nude stockings and black satin slippers.

I heard Miss Miles mention a bathing suit and began reflecting how very pleasant it would be at the present minute to be wearing a bathing suit.

"Of course, it's a trifle late in the season to be getting a new one," Miss Miles continued. "But my other one is sadly faded, and I feel that a fresh new suit would make me feel keener and fresher."

"That's just the psychology I'm in favor of," Madame replied. "I apply it in frocks and bathing suits alike. In fact, I often make a specialty of attractive new bathing suits at this time of year simply because I feel that any woman would do well to have a new one."

"Besides, I refuse to feel extravagant," Miss Miles said. "I know your suits are so smart that this one will be quite right for me to take South next Winter."

"Well, I have some very smart advance models," Madame admitted.

I was asked to model the newest bathing suit and soon I was donning a [illegible] hand-blocked linen and cunning little bloomers of shiny black satin.

I tied a lilac and white rubberized silk handkerchief over my head, put on black satin bathing shoes and went forth for Miss Miles to have a look.

"Do come closer and let me see that stunning fabric," she said as soon as she saw me.

I did so and explained that the material was hand-blocked linen much like cretonne in effect, but more pliable in texture.

"The shiny satin bloomers are smart," she remarked in a pleased tone. "I like the way they match the shiny binding of the suit."

"The bloomers have three rows of elastic to give that shirred effect above the knees," Madame explained.

"I like the suit immensely," the prospective client admitted.

We showed her others, one a cunning affair with much cherry color in the design and with cherry satin bloomers.

"These bloomers have a different treatment at the knee," Madame explained. "There's a bias piece sewed on, which ties neatly at the side of the knee. This gives the trim effect of riding trousers and still allows ample freedom for knee movement."

Miss Miles thought these very smart, but she stuck to the gay printed bathing suit with the shiny black bloomers.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 3.

Although there may be a degree of activity in the general trend of events, according to the lunar transits, yet there may be but small financial return or security. Risking money in investment, speculation or in any manner may be hazardous and lending money may be ill advised. With care, business may hold together. Domestic and heart affairs may not be under favorable auspices.

Those whose birthday it is are under a rule making money matters critical if any manner of risk be attempted. Avoid speculation and lending money. There may be anxieties in the home and affectional relations. A child born on this day may suffer some loss through friends and encountering difficulties in love, yet live a successful life.

Good Night Stories

BILLY LEARNS TO TAKE CARE OF HIS CAP.

WHEN it came time to go to the circus, Billy couldn't find his cap anywhere.

"Where did you hang it?" asked his mama. "Uncle Ben can't wait, and unless you find your cap, you can't go." And Billy's mama went on about her work, leaving Billy to look for his own cap.

"Oh, dear, that's always the way," grumbled Billy. "Now I suppose I'll miss the circus just because I can't find my cap." And he began throwing things right and left in his search. "I wish the crazy thing was sewed to my coat, then I'll bet—"

"Be careful how you bet," laughed a squeaky voice, "or you may lose." And Gocomeback, the little travel elfin, hopped down from the stand where he had been sitting unnoticed for a long time. "What's gone?"

"My cap!" Billy fairly exploded. "And Uncle Ben's in a dreadful hurry and—"

Uncle Ben blew his horn three times. Billy heard the car start and he began to cry.

"Oh, don't do that!" laughed Gocomeback, "You should fix your cap the way a little fellow I know does; then you'd never lose track of it."

Before Billy could ask any questions, he found himself standing in front of a great tall snow mound in a land of ice and snow.

Two furry creatures, spying them, came running up, and Billy saw they were a little boy and his sister. They were dressed from head to foot in skins.

"There's a Reason."

"Eskimos!" whispered Billy. The little boy heard him and, laughing merrily, nodded his head.

Gocomeback introduced the Eskimo boy and his wee sister and told Billy that this was the little fellow who always knew where his cap was.

"There's a reason," laughed the little Eskimo boy. "Mother has it sewed to my coat. Couldn't do without my cap. Couldn't go into the house without it on."

"How's that?" Billy asked. "Mother doesn't like to have me wear my cap in the house."

"Well, you don't have to live in a snow house, I guess," laughed the little Eskimo boy. "We do, and to get inside, we have to crawl in through a low hole in the side of the snow wall and if we didn't pull our caps up close the snow would all get down our necks," and he showed Billy how he and his sister had to get into the house. "Better sew your cap to your coat, it's the only way," and the two children ran back to their barking dogs, jumped on their sleighs and rode away.

A machine honked out in front and Billy ran to the window and his foot struck something and there was his cap on the floor. Uncle Ben had just gone to fill up the gas tank.

You can believe it or not, after that when anyone called for Billy, he always knew just where to find his cap and he didn't have it sewed to his coat either.

Among the prettily appointed pre-nuptial parties being given in honor of Miss Esther Carpenter, fiancee of Wheeler Ralston, of Grafton, West Va., was the 6 o'clock dinner with which Miss Delores Walker entertained at her home, 523 south Seventh-st. Thursday evening.

A rainbow color scheme was used thruout the dining room in decorating for the function. Vari-colored candles, held in crystal sticks, tied with tulle in the corresponding pastel shades, held center-place at the small tables where the guests were seated. Extending from the candle to the individual places were stripes of satin ribbon in the same blending shades. Small white crepe paper baskets filled with pink and white candies, together miniature brides as place cards, adorned the tables. Exquisite favors, fancy pins for the hair, representing lovebirds, and set with brilliants, were given. Bouquets of gladioli and phlox were arranged thruout the Walker home in adding to the beauty of the party.

The kitchen shower following the dinner was planned as a surprise to the bride-elect. Packages were hidden in different places about the house and the honored guest was "given a line," to follow, which assisted her in locating the gifts.

Miss Walker was asissted in serving a delicious four course dinner by her mother, Mrs. Carl Walker and Mrs. Charles Carpenter, mother of the bride-elect. Covers were placed for: Mrs. John Williams, Mrs. Gourley Gray, Miss Gertrude Miller, Miss Zoe Shrake, Miss Ruby Ernest, Miss Hazel Gaumer, Miss Phebe Frederickson, Miss Beulah Merchant, Miss Alice Snyder, Miss Hazel McEveny, Miss Kathryn Speckman, Miss Miriam Krom, of Cincinnati, Miss Ruth Pfous, Miss Helen Wright, Miss Norma Hennel, Miss Marno Hay and Miss Carpenter.

Widow of President Harding Given Sympathy of the Nation

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 3.—Her own life despaired of but a year ago, Mrs. Warren G. Harding today bore up bravely under the blow which took from her a beloved husband of thirty two years, and from the nation its chief executive—with tragic suddenness.

After a night of sorrow, she today was retaining that composure which she promised those at the bedside would be hers when she realized her husband of over three decades had gone.

An official statement from Dr. C. E. Sawyer early today set at rest rumors of collapse on the part of Mrs. Harding and told of her brave rally.

"I regret that the statement has been printed in early editions of the papers that Mrs. Harding collapsed after the death of the president," said Dr. Sawyer's statement

"Mrs. Harding is a very brave woman. From the beginning she has known of the serious and threatening phases of her husband's illness and she prepared hers lf for any emergency. She has been with him constantly, ministering to his wants and watching over him.

"Death came suddenly, without warning, as she was reading to him at the end of a day of apparent improvement. She was shocked, of course, and at first unable to realize that she had lost the husband who had made up all the interest in her life for so many proud and happy years But there was no collapse, no hysteria Just a brave rally to face her sorrows and duties devolving upon her at this hour. I give this statement in order that her many friends may not be unduly alarmed as to her condition"

"I can't realize it—I can't realize it—still, I've got something to do," she cried as Dr Sawyer wordlessly imparted the information that the nation's beloved executive had departed.

"I am not going to collapse," Mrs. Harding said, setting her lips in a determined line, the tears streaming down her cheeks.

Wives of cabinet officers who had been hurriedly summoned, led her from the room

The scene which culminated in the broadcasting to the world of President Harding's death began while Mrs Harding was reading a current magazine article to her husband courthouse to take appropriate action regarding the death of the president and arrangements are going forward to drape the city. A meeting of the Retail Merchants Bureau was held this morning and plans were made for draping the store buildings and regarding hours of closing at the time of the funeral A similar meeting was held at noon by the directors of the Marion Chamber of Commerce.

Dr George T. Harding, father of the president, was up early this morning, having partially recovered from the first shock of the news of his son's death. He rested a little last night after his son, Dr. George T. Harding, Jr., of Columbus, had arrived at the home here, driving to Marion immediately up on learning of the death of his brother. Mrs. Carrie Votaw and Miss Abigail Harding, sisters of the president, were located last night in Washington and are expected to arrive home this evening. They have been on a trip in the east.

Dr. Harding took the news of the death of his son very hard. He was notified personally by friends just as soon as the word was received here last night.

One of the first services for the dead president was held this morning at St. Paul's Episcopal church and was conducted by the Rev. I. Frederic Jones, the pastor. A requiem service was held. The church stands immediately east of the Star building and it was in the shadow of this edifice that the dead president labored so many years in building up the Star from a modest beginning.

In Memoriam

LAYING aside the heavy burdens that he took up with reluctance and misgivings, Warren Gamaliel Harding, twenty-ninth American President, and well beloved son of Ohio, has paid the toll that has been paid with fateful persistence either in office or shortly after retirement by practically every President from Washington down.

Today our people of every creed and of all shades of political belief stand in mute contemplation of a common bereavement and as ordinary citizens of the Republic extend in silence to the grief-stricken widow the tender affection and sympathy which wells in every heart today. Herself an invalid, but withal a brave, competent, high-minded woman, may it be given to her to hold fast to the noble determination expressed in her first words after the realization of her stunning loss:, "I shall not break down."

With the place which history shall accord him, the American people are not concerned today. Mr. Harding was a kindly, generous, big-hearted, sympathetic man. He may have escaped "greatness," but of his own right he possessed the qualities which endeared him to his fellowmen. Beyond this the millions of his fellow citizens who genuinely regret his taking are not concerned. For after all, he was a simple man among men, a true friend, a good neighbor, a citizen who, however much others differed from him in their views of public policy, was an honest, patriotic gentlemen, passionately fond of his country and her historic traditions.

His prolonged Alaskan tour undoubtedly hastened the end. It was a physical strain sufficient to have taxed the vitality of a much younger man. It is said that a load of anxiety was lifted from the minds of his physicians when he returned safely and in apparent good health to continental United States. That his strength was not sufficient to carry him back to Washington, or, better yet, to his beloved home in Marion, is regrettable. But the decrees of fate were otherwise and he at least had the satisfaction of reaching the end as he would have wished, in the harness and doing each day and in his own way the tasks which his high office imposed.

It would seem that the American people have had sufficient warning from the past to perform an act of simple justice that our wisest counsellors from the beginning have admonished them, in simple justice to the incumbents of this great office to do, namely to extend the presidential term to six, seven, or even eight years and by constitutional amendment limit the official tenure of the President to one term. There is to our knowledge not one valid reason against this change, while its practicality and feasibility are urged by numerous reasons commonly known to us all.

The fact is notorious that our existing plan of presidential tenure condemns the man the people have elected to the presidency for four years to spend the major portion of that time in listening to the petty tales of impecunious office seekers; to spend countless valuable hours in consultation with two-by-four politicians on matters of no possible consequence to the nation at large; to compromise with all the varying political winds that blow in order to qualify for a second term; to pursue a course of opportunism and expediency in his relations with the legislative branches; and, in short to sacrifice about all the high ideals with which he went into office largely because of the drudgery and importunities which must ever come with an office whose incumbent "we the people" have decreed shall not exercise whatever of statesmanlike qualities he may possess, but whom we compel from the hour we induct him into office, to listen to our childish quarrels about third-rate postmasterships and puerile jobs as Consuls to foreign cities of which most of us have never heard.

There is no more senseless tradition calling itself American than that of "a second term" for our presidents. Better one good term, unhampered by fear of defeat; unmarred by the petty complainings of alleged friends; uncompromised by questions of mere political expediency and immeasurably strengthened by the thot that nothing but service to the whole people shall count and that not all the politicians in America could swerve him from the right way into the dangerous paths of political opportunism, should be the heritage of every American President as he crosses the threshold of the White House.

There is no doubt but that the mid-term elections disturbed the mind of President Harding. While his party came thru the congressional contest of 1922 a winner, it was plainly indicated then that the tide was turning, not necessarily toward the opposite major party, but away from those policies upon which the President had set his heart. Still later state and senatorial elections confirmed the marked tendency of this political backwash. At the very outset of his ill-fated Alaskan trip a heavy blow was dealt his party in the rock-ribbed Republican state of Minnesota.

To a man of the sincerity and honesty of conviction of President Harding these events were more than disturbing. They inflicted a mental depression that we now know produced a profound effect on his physical stamina. It probably would be an exaggeration to say that Warren G. Harding died of a broken heart. It is all too true that the adverse verdict of the people the past two years on policies and measures upon which he had staked his political future and in which he believed with all his simple, kindly sincerity, affected him profoundly both in body and mind at a time when unusual exertion demanded every ounce of physical vitality he possessed.

The times upon which his official tenture fell were troublesome indeed. Discontent at home and wars and rumors of wars in the world at large, superimposed upon the ordinarily irksome presidential duties a load which few men could bear without bowing to the point of breaking. From the first rumor connecting his name with a presidential nomination, to the day of his election, Mr. Harding, with characteristic and unaffected modesty, expressed doubt as to his fitness for the Herculean task.

And in this mental attitude lay the saving grace which sustained him thru the past two and a half arduous years. With a whimsical, half pathetic disclaimer of any claims to "statesmanship," Warren G. Harding went about his thankless duties with infinite patience and a sense of humor that endeared him to his political foes as well as his own partisans.

For him the hour has struck. For him Fate held forth a cup in which the bitter and the sweet were mixed and commanded that he drink. At least in the quiet sepulcher in his beloved Marion he will find the rest that he like so many before him in the exalted presidential office sought in vain. May his faults be forgotten and his memory kept perpetually green among a people he sought with sincerity and unselfishness to serve.

New York Day-by-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK Aug. 3—Thots while strolling around New York' Dusk The hour of transient desolation. Farmers are leaving their ploughs. The city plans for its night. A cafe named for Karl Marx. A limousine equipped with screens Goggles and cream colored auto coats

Devil-may-care "gobs". Prime muscles and hard fists. An old marble cutter chipping away in the twilight. Dinner groups caught in the head winds of pleasure Seedy snipe hunters. A comely coloratura going to her theatre.

Perspiring ballyhoos trying to fill Coney Island buses. They always need "Just two more." Pastry window with foam-white cakes. The Metropolitan's summer gloom. Piano box music stores Red lanterned excavations symbolizing Broadway pitfalls.

Beckoning lights. Heralding "Fair and wetter!" Mark Leuscher and his trio of Airdales An ambulance stops at a shady hotel Who was it classified Broadway as. Women, garbage and death' Peggies, Daisies and Dotties brave the lights. Horsey men with field glasses.

Orchestras tuning up. All night flower stores receive their fresh supplies. Fat wives and tired husbands walking off domestic dullness. The arbiter elegantiarum of New York society. What's he doing in town on a hot day like this?

That man selling a freckle cure announces he was once a "human fly." But the law won't permit him to work any more Smirking, swarthy faces. The moving sidewalk on Forty Second street still unfinished. Scholarly librarians going home.

More girls with Japanese. Elsie Ferguson's husband Whatever became of the day and night banks? Park sparkers waiting for the romance of moonlight. Now for the carpet slippers.

Eddie Cantor has praise for his new bootlegger. He says he gives every customer a tin cup and six lead pencils so he may go into business for himself if the liquor blinds him

And here's one of the foolish musical comedy jokes that is going around

"What's the old man's name?"

"Smith."

"That's a very unusual name."

"Yes, and what's even more unusual, his son is also named Smith."

My first stage love was Della Fox In the days of "Wang" I sat in the gallery to see her six nights in a row. And then I'd run around to the stage entrance just to see her leave. When cigarette pictures were the vogue I had a Della Fox gallery. Despite all this, I found myself rather resenting a group of young men who were standing around the Folbes stage door to see the beauties leave the other night. What we of the middle age need is tolerance and a lot of it.

There is a story of a baseball player studying a book of etiquette. After the second week he was at the Polo Grounds and addressed one of the umpires as "Mister."

"One more bit of sarcasm from you and you go off the lot," yelled the umpire.

The grouchiest traffic policeman in New York is one on Madison Avenue in the Forties. He was balling out a truck driver the other day and then waved him away. Out of the danger zone the driver yelled "Good by, Sweetie."

WALT MASON

THE TRUTH SERUM

The smooth promoter came to sell some stock in Gusher's Petrol Well. "Here is your greatest chance," he swore, "to bring Dame Fortune to your door. This well is in the richest field, and countless millions it will yield—" I interrupted him to say, "I got some wondrous dope today: injected in a fellow's frame, he sees that falsehood is a shame; like Washington, in days gone by, he simply cannot tell a lie So I will shoot some in your arm; then you may boost your coal oil farm" I overpowered him then with ease, and shot Truth Serum in his knees He slowly settled in a chair and said, "My oil well is a snare, it is as dry as 'dobe bricks, it is a trap to catch the hicks In all the land for miles around no sign of oil was ever found, there isn't oil enough down there to grease a bald man's fringe of hair I fear that serum wearing off so lead me to the water trough, where I may gently soak my head, and this recall the things I've said" Oh, wondrous serum that will make the fakir disgruntled fool I always keep a keg in store and agents who approach my door must take a shot or till cease to listen to their getrich news

CAMPAIGN TO KEEP LAKE CLEAN BEGUN

CHICAGO, Aug 2 — Yacht and motor-boat owners who persist in contaminating the waters of Lake Michigan with refuse from their crafts near bathing beaches of Chicago will be vigorously prosecuted

This was the warning sounded by Health Commissioner Bundesen as he explained the procedure the city is taking to make the lake safe for Chicagoans this summer.

"Quite a few of these yachts and motor boats hang around the beaches, their skippers and crews intent on enticing bathing girls," the commssioner explained. "Refuse, especially from the larger boats, is emptied into the lake, regardless of location, thus contaminating the waters until they are unsafe—and often dangerous—for bathers.

"A rigid patrol of the beaches will be instituted soon, and all such craft will be seized and their owners arrested. It is my intention to stamp out such debasing practices among unscrupulous yacht owners," the commissioner asserted.

Attaches of Commissioner Bundeson's office also announced the Health Department will spray chlorine over the beach waters to purify them some time in the near future Motor boats will be used for this purpose, they added. The cost for the remainder of the summer will be in the neighborhood of $5,000, according to estimates

VICTOR'S BAND IS DECIDED HIT; TO PLAY THIS EVE.

Victor's band made a decided hit with the Redpath chautauqua-goers in its initial appearance at the big canvas Friday afternoon.

Despite the threatening weather a big crowd was in attendance to welcome the big musical combination. The musical program was a variety of classical and popular numbers.

Nothing else appeared on the afternoon program.

Such pieces as the celebrated "Minuet" by Paderewski; "Zampa," overture by Harold, with clarinet cadenzas by Signor Costanzo; and "Berceuse" from "Joselyn," by Godard and a number of popular songs as "Carolina in The Morning," were included in the band's program.

The musicians will give another concert this evening.

Songs and speaking comedy by the band members form an interesting part of the two programs, afternoon and evening. The concert is well worth the price of admission.

This morning children's hour was enjoyed by a number of youngsters.

On Saturday morning children's hour will be held. Also Joseph Baldi, accordionist and Clemens' Marionettes offering, "Jack and the Bean Stock," will appear on the morning program. The accordionist and Hon. W. L. Harding, former governor of Iowa, lecturer, will appear on the evening program.

Says Condition of Farmers Exaggerated

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. The farmers of the nation are not nearly so bad off as it has been pictured to the public, Eugene Meyer, Jr. [illegible] of the war finance corporation said here today. END COMES constant companions on the Alaskan tour were down stairs, dining. Only the usual secret service guard and a few casual newspaper correspondents, their vigilance relaxed because of the continued optimistic bulletins on the president's convalescence were about the halls.

Eight floors below there was the customary dinner throng, gay, happy, gathering in the great dining room to the accompaniment of an orchestra.

Into this crowd there suddenly dashed frantic bell boys, paging members of the cabinet, the members of the official party, but loudest of all the doctors.

Dr. Boone, the naval officer whose name had leaped first to the lips of a frantic and terrified nurse, was dining with General John Pershing. He was out of the dining room and across the lobby into the elevators while the boys were still running between the tables.

Then commotion broke loose in the hotel. Every one knew that something was wrong. No one knew what.

Shortly the word came down. The president was dead.

The death of the president was announced exactly the same way as the bulletins on his condition have been issued every day since his illness.

Judson C. Welliver, chief clerk of the White House, went to the president's apartment to find out what was "wrong." As a member of the White House staff, he was permitted to go beyond the "dead line" which was established several days ago and beyond which the newspaper correspondents were not allowed.

"There will be a bulletin in a few minutes," he said to the waiting reporters. He went into a stenographer's room and there was a clicking of typewriters.

When he emerged he silently handed out this:

"August 2, 1923, 7:35 p. m.

"The president died instantaneously and without warning while conversing with members of his family at 7:30 p. m. Death was apparently due to some brain evolvement, probably apoplexy. During the day he had been free from discomfort and there was every justification for anticipating a prompt recovery."

It was signed by the five physicians who have been constantly in attendance—Dr. Sawyer, Dr. Boone, Dr. Work, all of Washington, and Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of the American Medical Association, and Dr. C. M. cooper, an eminent heart specialist, of San Francisco.

The cabinet officers present, Secretaries Work, Hoover and Wallace, and Attorney General Daugherty, meanwhile had gathered in a room adjoining where the president's body lay covered with a sheet, reverently drawn over it by the weeping nurses. They had a duty to perform.

It consisted of the following telegram to Vice President Calvin Coolidge, now by the whim of an inscrutable fate, the chief executive of the greatest republic in the world:

"The president died at 7:30 p. m. from a stroke of cerebral apoplexy. The end came peaceably and without warning."

Each of the four signed it silently—the attorney general with fingers that trembled. His eyes were wet. Those who knew of the almost brotherly affection between Warren G. Harding and Harry M. Daugherty did not wonder at his emotion. Few men in American public life have been closer to each other than were "Warren" and "Harry." By some, Harry M. Daugherty was considered the Warwick who had been largely instrumental in lifting Warren G. Harding from his editorial chair into the senate, and from the senate into the whitehouse.

His grief was pitiful. He seemed dazed by the shock, and there was none who saw his grief stricken figure slump down the hall but who felt a silent wave of sympathy.

By a strange freak of fate, Daugherty had not seen the president since his arrival in San Francisco. He could have—but he said no, that he did not want to "bother him." Now he was dead and Daugherty saw thru the half open door the figure of the man he loved, cold in death.

In the death room itself preparations were shortly begun to make the physical arrangements necessary for the transporting of the body back to the capital where it will lie in state while a great nation pays tribute.

Mrs. Harding, whose life a year ago had been despaired of, and who suffered one partial collapse on the present trip, was [illegible] from the room biting her lip and clenching her hands to restrain the emotion that welled within her and which she was controlling only by the most visible effort. She was crying but [illegible] did not collapse, despite earlier reports to the contrary.

Mrs. E. E. Remsberg, sister of the president, [illegible] from [illegible] a few days ago to see her brother for the first time in two years, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to give a few [illegible] tinent.

The same party that accompanied the president from Washington on that memorable June day six weeks ago will make the return journey on the funeral train. In addition, there will be Attorney General Daugherty, General Pershing and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Remsberg and their daughters.

The route to be followed will be the quickest - San Francisco to Reno, Ogden, Cheyenne, Omaha, Chicago and thence into the capital. No stops will be made other than those necessary in the operation of the train.

The president's body will be borne on a rear car, probably the ordinary type of observation car. At night, flying thru the miles of desert, plain and mountain, that lie between San Francisco and the capital it will be lighted, and at all times two soldiers and two sailors will stand at attention as a guard of honor about the casket.

Sixteen enlisted men and two officers from both the army and navy will comprise the last guard for President Harding.

The trip to Washington will be a fast one. Sixty-five hours to Chicago and twenty from Chicago to the capital was the forecast as preparations were being made to make up the train.

Until it is borne reverently to the train tonight, the body of the president will lie where life expired—in the presidential suite atop the Palace Hotel. Brief and simple services probably will be held there before the body is removed.

At the capital, the body will be borne to the Rotunda of the capitol, according to present plans, and there it will lay in state for a public funeral. Interment will be made at the president's old home in Marion, Ohio, whence he came eight years ago to the United States senate.

It is officially recorded that the president died of apoplexy, but by many of those who knew him intimately his death will always be regarded as due to overwork at a period in life when most men in business begin to slacken the pace —the same refusal to do which drove his immediate predecessor in the whitehouse to retirement a broken, shattered man, forever doomed to a life of semi-invalidism.

The president left Washington on June 20 for his first visit to the great west that lies beyond the Mississippi. It was the most ambitious trip ever undertaken by any president of the United States, a trip destined to carry him on a speaking trip across the continent, a long sea voyage and visit to Alaska, a return speaking trip down the California coast, and reembarkation at San Diego for a long journey and visit to the possessions of Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands via the Panama Canal.

Mr. Harding appeared to be in excellent health when he left the capital. He was keenly anticipatory of the trip and he had labored hard, often times far into the night at the whitehouse, during the hot days of early June, preparing the speeches he was to make enroute to Tacoma. He planned these speeches carefully, for they were to write the Republican platform for 1924, at least, to chart the course on a dozen great issues.

Intense heat greeted the president thru the Mississippi Valley and the heat, the constant travel, the great crowds that everywhere greeted him, the constantly changing food and water, the lack of exercise in the stuffy pullmans, all these things combined to sap a vitality as magnificent as any man ever took into the presidency. He showed the strain, but he cheerfully went along with his programs, strenuous programs they were, and ones which taxed men on the trip who were years younger than President Harding.

Thru St. Louis, Kansas City, Hutchinson, Denver and the upper reaches of the northwest, Mr. Harding went, daily meeting and going thru schedules that were too strenuous.

When the president reached Tacoma and sailed for Alaska he was tired. He showed it but the glow of his welcome across the country was stronger than his fatigue.

Three weeks were spent in Alaska, one of which into the interior, can legitimately be called the hardest trip ever undertaken by any chief executive. He was more tired when he rejoined the naval transport Henderson, to return to United States.

The president was considered by his physician to be responding very nicely to treatment. He was very weak but this was accounted for by the arduous trip that he had undergone and the fact that he purged [illegible] in getting rid of the poison that were at the root of the stomach ailments.

Yesterday he was utterly free of fever and of pain and was considered to be well on the road to recovery. He [illegible] considered so [illegible] that he [illegible] began [illegible] their confinement of [illegible] week and take turns at [illegible] some fresh air.

"We all believe" concluded [illegible] official account of his death [illegible] died of apoplexy [illegible] the blood vessel near the respiratory canal. His death came [illegible] recovery from acute illness was in [illegible]

Out of respect to our late President, Warren G. Harding the Grain Exchange of Chicago is closed for the day. The world will regret the passing of our leader. Mr. Harding's time in office was just approaching that period of closing up many of the international affairs that have been pressing him for his attention, and his presence at the whitehouse and numerous council meetings will be sadly missed. Calvin Coolidge now president of these United States will undoubtedly care for the work at hand in a manner that would meet the late President's approval if he were still here. We all have confidence that the work will be carried on to a satisfactory conclusion. We do not anticipate any great disturbance in the grain market following this sad event.

Coolidge home news of the tragic event had spread over the countryside and many persons had gathered at Plymouth.

Immediately after news of President Harding's death was received at Washington, secret service agents were detailed to protect the new national executive. They were to meet th Coolidge party and in accordance with law and custom ,take him under their guard.

Mr. Coolidge received the first news of President arding's death from a telegram sent from San Francisco by George B. Christian, the late president's secretary. Immediately afterward newspaper correspondents began arriving at the Coolidge home with the information.

The information from Mr. Christian read:

"Palace otel, San Francisco, Cal.
"Mr Calvin Coolidge,
Plymouth, Vermont.

"The president died instantly and without warning and while conversing with members of his family at 7:30 p. m. His physicians report that his death was apparently due to some brain embolism, probably an apoplexy.

"George B. Christian, Jr."

At once the following message was sent to Mrs. Harding at San Francisco:

"Mrs. Warren G. Hardin,
San Francisco,, Cal.

"We offer you our deepest sympathy. May God bless and keep you.

"Calvin Coolidge,
"Grace Coolidge."

There is no railway line running into Notch, the seat of the Coolidge home, and soon the roads were choked with motor cars.

The elder Coolidge met the first detachment of newspapermen at the door of his home.

"We were in bed when the telephone messenger at Bridgewater rushed in here and told us he had just caught a flash that President Harding was dead," said John C. Coolidge. "I awakened my son and daughter."

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge hastily dressed and rushed down stairs, where visitors already had begun to gather.

Mrs. Coolidge wept as she exclaimed to the International News Service:

"Poor Mrs Harding, I do feel so sorry for her. She had been so hopeful and brave. We are both shocked by the news. We could hardly believe it. We had made up our minds that the president was on the road to recovery. We are astounded by the tragedy."

The eldest of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge's sons, John, had departed Wednesday for the military training camp at Camp Devens. He did not have an opportunity until today to learn that his father is president of the United States.

President Coolidge issued the following statement:

"The world has lost a great and good man. I mourn his loss. He was my chief and my friend. It will be my purpose to carry out the policies which he has begun for the service of the American people and for meeting their responsibilities wherever they may arise. For this purpose I shall seek the co-operation of all those who have been associated with the president during his term of office."

SUNDAY'S GAME TO BE PLAYED ON THE NEWARK DIAMOND

Plans Changed As Newark Fans Want to See Regs in Action

According to Manager Ansel of the Newark Mendels the Coshocton Regulars will have to journey to Newark to play his club instead of playing at Lake Park.

The Newark fans have never seen the Regulars play at Newark this season. Sunday will be the first time this year the Regulars have played on Newark soil.

The Regulars and Mendels were first scheduled at Newark for two games. The Coshocton and Newark managers agreed to stage only a single game instead of a double-bill for financial reasons. Two games will not pay for either of the clubs.

According to an agreement the first of this week, Newark was to play the single game at Lake Park instead of at Newark. Last night Manager Robertson received a wire from Manager Ansel of Newark, stating that the fans in Newark will not permit the game to be staged in Coshocton.

Likely William Rasnick will be sent to the hill at Newark Sunday to oppose the Mendels. Here is how the two teams will lineup for Sunday: Coshocton—Atchinson, lf; Evans, 3b; Edwards 2b; Storch, cf; Unger, rf; Witt, ss; Gygli, lb; Hildebrant, c and Rasnick or Rea, p. INSANITY CHARGE DISMISSED; MAN IS FOUND SANE

An affidavit charging Benjamin J. Frederick, of Clark-tp with insanity and a petition to admit him to the Massillon state hospital, were both dismissed by Judge Milo C. Ely of probate court Thursday afternoon.

The papers wer filed by Catherine M. Frederick. J. B. Frederick was arrested and brot into court. Following an inquest conducted by Drs. Smailes and Lister Pomerene, Frederick was declared to be sane.

A similar examination of Frederick's mental condition was held about two years ago, with the same result.

ITALY TO

Italy paying anything on her debt to America was usually dismissed as fantastic. Overwhelmed with debts and torn asunder by internal difficulties the prospect o paying any foreign debt was not worth discussing. The American government in the last few months however, has been able to settle its terms with Great Britain and this has stimulated American ambassadors elsewhere to urge other countries to follow Great Britain's example.

Italy recognizes that first of all she must regain the confidence of American capitalists and that a step in the direction of paying the war debt would make a profound impression. As an instance of this policy of currying favor with America, there has been a good deal of wining and dining of American business men who might be presumed to exert their influence when they get home from their travels.

Words spoken by the American government thru Ambassador Richard Washburn Child supporting the Mussolini government come as a natural sequel to the latter's promises to pay her debts. There is no doubt that Mussolini has profited internally by the words of Child as well as by the words of President Harding which were reproduced in every Italian newspaper from one end of the Italian boot to the other.

Externally the Italian government under Mussolini also is playing a shrewd diplomatic game. Originally the Italians were inclined to tag rather Latin associates [illegible] France for sentimental reasons as that country [illegible] when as a So[illegible] from the Italian p[illegible] asylum.

W. G. HARDING

found governmental, social and industrial life in utter confusion. Business of the war had multiplied Federal details manyfold; the Shipping Board and the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, both born of the war, demanded revision to peace-time standards. Then, too, he had pledged himself to the injection of business methods into government control and the lifting of too much government regulation out of business. The railroads, in the hands of the Government during the war, were in a hapless condition. There were problems to tax the most capable of executives, yet the new administration, along Harding's plan of "a government by a party through parliamentary discussions and conferences," began to cleave its way through the morasses

PEACE WITH GERMANY

One of the first steps of the administration was the bringing about of a formal peace with the Central Powers. The peace resolution passed the Senate and the House and was signed by the President July 2, 1921.

On the recommendations of President Harding, Congress approved a budget system of government He had the distinction of appointing the first budget officer. Harding's recommendation that Congress enact legislation for a revision of the War Risk Bureau resulted in the bill which created the War Veterans' Bureau. Another important accomplishment was the final settlement by which the British Government agreed to the payment of its war debt of $4,600,000,000 to the United States.

Domestically, Harding was faced soon after his inauguration by a wave of unemployment, following an industrial let-down. Under Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover a Federal employment agency was established. After two years of application, efforts of the Government to conquer the unemployment problem were successful

..... SURPRISE NOMINEE .....

Harding went to the national Republican convention in 1920 backed by one term in the United States Senate and some experience in Ohio politics. He was not at first regarded as a contender. His nomination over Major-General Leonard Wood, Senator Hiram Johnson, Governor Albert D Lowden, of Illinois, and Herbert Hoover came as a surprise.

The election of President Harding was declared more of a repudiation of the League of Nations and of Woodrow Wilson than a tribute to the candidate. Once in the White House, however, Harding began to give the impression that he had risen to the plane dethe campaign; that he had been generally underestimated and that in his new position as Chief Executive he had risen to the pane demanded of a President.

Harding was born November 2, 1865, at Corsica, Ohio. His father was Dr. George T. Harding, a country physician. Years before his great-grandfather, of Scotch ancestry, had come westward from Pennsylvania in an ox-cart to seek a home for his family in the wilderness of Ohio.

WAS PRINTER'S DEVIL

The President-to-be worked first as a printer's devil on the Caledonia Argus. His "entrance into politics" took place during the Garfield campaign in 1880—he played a tenor horn in a torchlight procession.

In 1882 Harding received the degree of Bachelor of Science from Ohio Central College, where he had distinguished himself chiefly as editor of the school newspaper. He devoted his energies to law, insurance and then newspaper work. Later he purchased the Marion Star. Returning from the Chicago Republican convention, where he saw Blaine nominated, Harding found the Star in the hands of the sheriff.

Undaunted, Harding, though a stand-pat Republican, became a reporter on the Mirror, a Democratic newspaper Because he had insisted on wearing a Blaine hat during the campaign he lost his job.

Harding taught school for a time and played a horn in the prize band at Marion. Eventually the Star drifted back into his hands. Today the newspaper is a prosperous business, is widely quoted and has a large circulation, atlhought it is now in other hands

In 1899 Harding was elected to the State Senate. He served two terms and, in 1903, became Lieutenant Governor of Ohio. Harding had begun at this time to be a political influence even in the face of such politicians as Hanna, McKinley and Foraker, who were practically in control of the Republican party in Ohio

His first political defeat occurred in 1910, when he was a candidate for Governor. Four years later he was elected to the United States Senate for a six year term. In 1916 he was the chairman of the national Republican convention having made the keynote speech as temporary chairman.

During Harding's career in the Senate he was influential in councils which formulated party policies. He served on eight committees, including Foreign Relations and Commerce. While he [illegible] national impor[illegible] he was regarded as a con[illegible] Senator [illegible] wealth of common sense and nothing of the demagogue.

Harding was a strong proponent of the [illegible] in Mexican affairs and the note writing of President Wilson to Germany. When Wilson said America entered the war to make the world safe for Democracy Harding declared the United States should not deem herself called upon to reorganize the Od World.

CONDEMNED THE LEAGUE

In the rejection of the League of Nations Harding felt America made no surrender "of our hope and ambition for an association of nations to promote world peace." He condemned the League as constituted and demanded the continued normal development of international law as the basis of control of international relations—the forerunner of his later determined espousal of the World Court project.

Prior to his election Harding had been three times abroad, visiting most of the countries of Europe to study at first hand their systems of government and the economic problems with which this country has to deal, so far as Europe is concerned. Before he took his seat in the Senate Harding paid an extensive visit to the Hawaiian Islands [illegible] information on the production and distribution of sugar

30 FAST ROUNDS ARE BOOKED ON EAGLES' PROGRAM

Seats are being erected at Camp McGuire, near Canal Lewisville by the Eagles' lodge for the purpose of accomodating 700 fans for the third big boxing card to be staged at that camp on Monday evening, August 6.

The Eagle promoters of this big boxing card of 30 rounds received word Friday that Frankie Susnell, of Rochester, Pa. would be at the Eagles' camp Saturday and work out for his bout Monday. He will complete his training at the camp on Sunday morning.

Susnell is to fight Andy Stahura in the main go. Both boxers are reported in fine shape. Stahura hails from Braddock, Pa.

The K. O. Tobans-Hawkins bout is stirring up interest. Both boys are confident of victory. Tobans hails from Newcomerstown and Hawkins this city.

A number of other fast bouts are scheduled for Monday night.

Tickets were on sale Wednesday at all local pool rooms and at Billy Wills' lunch place.
